This year the Tiger Dublin Fringe celebrates 21 years of innovation, imagination and risk taking with what promises to be one pretty spectacular festival. Running from September 7th till September 20th the Tiger Dublin Fringe brings everything to the table. Dance, theatre, cabaret, circus, carnival, comedy, music and live art, served both indoors and out, all are included in all their glory, along with the welcome return of the Spiegel tent.

Once again, this year features a generous blend of Irish and international performances. Australian circus legends Scotch & Soda are notable highlights, as is the Tony-nominated Mx Justin Vivian Bond. Other highlights include Kim Noble's You're Not Alone, Grounded by Siren productions, It Folds by Brokentalkers and junk ensemble and Irish Youth Opera's production of Agrippina. Potential hidden gems include Liadain Herriott with Liminal, featuring as part of a double bill along with Emma Fitzgerald and Antje O'Toole with Tend. Herriott's excellent TURF was one of last year's surprises, as was yeahsurewhatever's An Insignificant Man, who also return this year with No Encore.

But this is just skimming the surface. Festival director Kris Nelson's eclectic program appears to offer an embarrassment of riches, with something to suit everyone's taste and plenty to intrigue the imagination, all of which can be found at Tiger Dublin Fringe

For those travelling to Dublin for the festival, a welcome feature on the Tiger Dublin Fringe website is the inclusion of a Visit Dublin section which offers helpful links on transport, where to stay and where to eat.
